Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 112

1. The following is a quotation of the second paragraph of 35 U.S.C. 112:

The specification shall conclude with one or more claims particularly pointing out and distinctly claiming the subject matter which the applicant regards as his invention.

2. Claim 3 is rejected under 35 U.S.C. 112, second paragraph, as being indefinite for failing to particularly point out and distinctly claim the subject matter which applicant regards as the invention.

Claim 3 is vague and indefinite with respect to claim 1 from which it depends.

Specifically, claim 1 recites "raising, in connection with the supply of the heating medium, the pressure in the retort to a second pressure." Thus, the second pressure is higher than the first pressure. However, claim 3 recites that the "first pressure is approximately the same as the second pressure."

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 103

3. The following is a quotation of 35 U.S.C. 103(a) which forms the basis for all obviousness rejections set forth in this Office action:

(a) A patent may not be obtained though the invention is not identically disclosed or described as set forth in section 102 of this title, if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains. Patentability shall not be negated by the manner in which the invention was made.

4. The factual inquiries set forth in Graham v. John Deere Co., 383 U.S. 1, 148 USPQ 459 (1966), that are applied for establishing a background for determining obviousness under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) are summarized as follows:

1. Determining the scope and contents of the prior art.
2. Ascertaining the differences between the prior art and the claims at issue.
3. Resolving the level of ordinary skill in the pertinent art.

4. Considering objective evidence present in the application indicating obviousness or nonobviousness.
5. Claims 1-20 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Persoons (US 2005/0013908) in view of Takano (US 2003/0053928).

Persoons teaches a method of heat-treatment of a laminated paperboard package. See paragraphs [0009]-[0011]. The packages are placed within a retort which is pressurized with steam in a ‘come up’ phase step to 2 bar. Then the packages are further pressurized with steam in a ramped ‘come up’ phase and held at 4.8 bar and an elevated temperature for a heat treating phase. See Table 1. The pressure within the retort is subsequently reduced to a level less than that in the package. See paragraphs [0012], [0017], and [0024]. The packages are cooled with a spray or trickle of cooled process water, which reduces the pressure within the packages. See paragraph [0018]. Persoons discloses that maintaining the pressure within the retort at a level lower than the pressure within the package reduces ingress of moisture into exposed paperboard edges. Persoons does not teach using air in the initial pressurizing step.

Takano discloses a method for pressure heating packages. Takano teaches using a turbo blower which pulls air from the top side opening of the retort, mixes the air with steam, and injects the combination of air and steam back into the retort for pressurization thereof. See paragraphs [0011], [0034], [0055], [0059], [0060].

As Takano evidences that the use of air in the pressurization step is effective in achieving the necessary pressure within the retort while reducing cold spots, it would have been obvious to employ the turbo blower of Takano in the method of Persoons.

With respect to the first pressure being “approximately 3 bar,” the Examiner submits that one of ordinary skill in the art would have found it obvious to optimize the pressure within the retort dependent upon the desired treatment parameters.

Claim Objections

6. Claim 17 is objected to under 37 CFR 1.75(c), as being of improper dependent form for failing to further limit the subject matter of a previous claim. Applicant is required to cancel the claim(s), or amend the claim(s) to place the claim(s) in proper dependent form, or rewrite the claim(s) in independent form. Specifically, claim 17 depends from claim 7 and fails to further limit this claim, as it contains the identical limitations.
